Some bosses prefer to exchange information by email once a day. Others favor in-person meetings on, say, only Friday afternoons. To ensure a strong relationship with your boss, ask how he or she likes to communicate most, says Randy Siegel, founder of Build Your Leaders, a career-coaching firm in Asheville, N.C. Also, find out how often your boss wants to hear from you and whether you should offer detailed information or brief summaries. Then adjust your communication style accordingly, he says.
